"THE DANGER LINE"

The action of this story takes place in Japan.

While the Marquis Yorisaka is absent on a secret governmental mission in Paris, his wife, the Marquise, meets Mrs. Hockey, a wealthy American divorcee, and Captain Fergan, an attache of the English army.

Mrs. Hockey amuses herself by Americanizing the little Marquis, and Captain Fergan finds her so attractive that he falls victim to her charms.

Yorisake returns unexpectedly and finds his Japanese home Americanized and his wife dressed in fashionable American clothes and Fergan very attentive to her. He is warned by his friend, Hirata that the Marquise and Fergan are having an affair, but says that he can trust his wife because she loves him dearly.

Yorisaka secures a place for Fergan on his vessel and watches him closely.

The naval battle takes place with Yorisaka in command. He is wounded and orders Fergan to take his place. Fergan at first refuses, because he is a neutral, but Yorisaka insists. For the sake of the Marquise, Fergan takes command. Fergan is mortally wounded and dies.

The Japanese are victorious and the city is in a mad frenzy of rejoicing.

Yorisaka is brought home on a stretcher to his wife, and there is a complete understanding. She tells him that there has never been anything between herself and Fergan, and she and the Marquis decide that their own ways, customs and habits are the best.
